

General History

Soda Tracker is a very compact program that can be used to keep track of the soda you've taken from the fridge at work. It will keep a log of transaction type, transaction date and time, the transaction amount and your ending balance that can easily be displayed at any time. It starts minimized, so unless you tell it to show the main window you will never be bothered by it. You can just start it and keep it running and perform all the main functions all from the tray icon. With this program you can put $10 in the change bucket and forget about it for a while until your balance runs out.

Soda Tracker is a program that we've been writing since mid November of 2006. It was started to fill our needs for tracking soda purchases. It hadn't had much development time since it serves a single purchase, it isn't too complicated, and we didn't think there would be much demand for the product. During its initial (and brief) public distribution across many sites it received more downloads then we could have imagined. After its distribution we had to take it down so that we could make an official version for widespread release. So, we polished it up and released it to the mainstream public again.
